Juvenile Court Offense Referrals

Juvenile court offense referrals are a way to track trends in juvenile crime. A court referral is a listing of a juvenile's name and offense in the juvenile court's legal record keeping system. It is a record that the juvenile was arrested or cited for an offense by a law enforcement agency, and then referred to the prosecutor. A referral is not a conviction.

The number of juvenile court offense referrals is always greater than the number of arrests, because a referral may include other court procedures, such as warrants.

In 2005, the Administrative Office of the Courts converted counties from the previous JUVIS reporting system to a new Juvenile and Corrections System (JCS). The JCS is a major component of the effort to better serve the needs of courts and judges. As a result of the statewide conversion to JCS, pre-2006 data is not comparable. Data for 2007, 2008 and 2009 has been reviewed.

The JCS was developed to support the unique needs of juvenile departments, standardizing data and enabling statewide data sharing with JIS, local court systems and other justice agencies. The new system is Web-based – much more user-friendly than the old code-driven system – and eliminates the need for multiple entries of the same data.

Previously, AOC used four applications to record and process information on each juvenile in their system. These programs - the Judicial Information System (JIS), the Superior Court Management Information System (SCOMIS), the Juvenile Information System (JUVIS), all mainframe-based applications and the Court Automated Proceedings and Scheduling System (CAPS), a web-based application needed to be integrated and simplified to enable customers to decrease duplicate data-entry time, to provide a single consolidated view of as much pertinent information about a youth as possible, and for professionals working on a case to access information easily.

The county prosecutor is responsible for prosecuting juvenile cases. The prosecutor decides whether to divert a case, whether charges should be filed and which offenses should be charged. A juvenile may be involved in more than one case within a year depending on the number of times the juvenile offends. A case may involve more than one charge/offense depending on the circumstances of the event and the decision of the prosecutor.

Juveniles who commit minor/first offenses may be offered diversion instead of being taken to court. Juveniles who do not complete a diversion agreement, refuse diversion, or are refused diversion are charged in juvenile court.

In 2009, 47,725 cases were referred to the prosecutor for criminal offenses. Cases referred to diversion comprised 38 percent of the cases and charges were filed on 39 percent of the cases; and on 20 percent of the cases there was no action taken. The courts remanded juveniles to adult court in less than one percent of the cases charged.

In 2009, just over seven percent of the juvenile cases where a youth was found to be guilty were sentenced to the Juvenile Rehabilitation Administration (JRA). Eighty-two percent of the cases were sentenced to local detention or disposition alternatives.

During 2009, 165 juvenile cases (less than one half of one percent of those juvenile cases referred to the prosecutor) were transferred to adult court. Counties where ten or more juvenile cases were remanded to adult court were Benton/Franklin (10), Chelan (12), Clark (18), Pierce (20), Spokane (26), and Yakima (28).

During 2008, 129 juvenile cases (less than one half of one percent of those juvenile cases referred to the prosecutor) were transfered to adult court. Counties where ten or more juvenile cases were remanded to adult court were Chelan (12), Clark (21), Skagit (21), Spokane (24), and Yakima (11).

Sentencing within the standard range was the most common disposition. Over eighty-three percent of the juvenile cases adjudicated guilty were sentenced within the standard range. Approximately two and a half percent were sentenced outside the standard range (judge declared a manifest injustice [M.I.]). Of the cases sentenced outside the standard range, eighty-five percent of the cases were above the standard range (MI up) and fifteen percent of the cases were below the standard range (MI down). Males have legal cases filed at a higher rate than females. Seventy percent of the juvenile cases referred to the prosecutor in 2008 involved males. Eighty-four percent of the juvenile cases remanded to adult court involved males.

Gender

Males have legal cases filed at a higher rate than females. Seventy percent of the juvenile cases referred to the prosecutor in 2009 involved males. Eighty-four percent of the juvenile cases remanded to adult court involved males.

Cases referred to the prosecutor that involved females were much less likely to be charged (31 percent for females, compared to 42.5 percent for males in 2009). Females referred to the prosecutor were more likely to be deferred than males (50 percent for females and 33 percent for males in 2009).

Race and Ethnic Distribution

Of the cases where race or ethnicity was recorded in 2009, 61 percent of the cases referred to the prosecutor were White, twelve percent were Black, four percent were Native American, fifteen percent were Hispanic, three percent were Asian American, and five percent were unknown/other.

Of the juvenile cases remanded to adult court where race was recorded 35 percent of the juveniles were White, four percent were Black, four percent were Native American, 56 percent were Hispanic, and one percent were Asian American.

In 2008, 9,141 juvenile cases were sentenced within the local standard range. Of those cases where race or ethnicity was recorded, 60 percent were White, 13 percent were Black, four percent were Native American, 17 percent were Hispanic, and three were Asian American.

The following table shows the percentage of youth referred to the prosecutor by race/ethnicity and the percentage of those youth that had charges filed or diversions filed.

Data is not comparable to pre 2006 data due to reporting change to JCS system.

These data were obtained from the Office of the Administrator for the Courts, May 2011

Differences in data entry practices among the juvenile courts may contribute to variations in the data. Not all juvenile courts utilize all categories.

Informal Action includes: Form letter response, Other remedies available, and Counseled, closed at intake.

Transfer to Adult Court is the number of referrals that were moved into the Adult system because of age of the juvenile, seriousness of the offense, or the juvenile's criminal history.

Data is not comparable to pre 2006 data due to reporting change to JCS system.

These data were obtained from the Office of the Administrator for the Courts, May 2011

Differences in data entry practices among the juvenile courts may contribute to variations in the data. Not all juvenile courts utilize all categories.

Informal Action includes: Form letter response, Other remedies available, and Counseled, closed at intake.

Transfer to Adult Court is the number of referrals that were moved into the Adult system because of age of the juvenile, seriousness of the offense, or the juvenile's criminal history.
