What's this about?

Washington state's Alzheimer's Disease Working Group is hosting Community Meetings. The group wants to hear about what's needed and what could be improved to better help people with dementia and their family caregivers. Public input will be used to shape strategic plans and policies. Listed to the right are dates and locations →

Background

The Alzheimer's Disease Working Group is developing our first state plan to address dementia. The group is looking into the needs of people with dementia, the services available to meet these needs and the capacity of the state and current providers to meet future needs.
