

Consolidated Juvenile Services

The CJS program, initiated in 1981, is a partnership between the state, county juvenile courts and the private sector, in which each shares in the cost of providing local comprehensive services to youthful offenders. These pre-commitment services include: diversion, probation supervision, individual and family counseling, drug/alcohol assessment and treatment, vocational training, and psychiatric and psychological services. There are CJS programs for at-risk youth in all 33 juvenile court jurisdictions serving the 39 counties.

The CJS funding allocations for FY 2009-2011, is approximately 13 million dollars. The funding formula used for determining CJS funding is: 65 percent for the 10 to 17 year old population, 10 percent for birth through 17 year old minority population, 5 percent for TANF recipients, 10 percent for criminal filings, 5 percent for per capita income, and 5 percent for youth that receive a manifest injustice to JRA.

CJS Application Process

Counties applying for CJS funds for the 2009-2011 biennium were required to describe efforts to address minority disproportionality in their plans. Any county applying for CJS funding that also operated a detention facility were required to have standards of operation in place. These included intake and admissions, medical and health care, communication, correspondence, visiting and telephone use, security and control, sanitation and hygiene, juvenile rights, rules and discipline, property, juvenile records, safety and emergency procedures, programming, release and transfer, training and staff development, and food service.

SSODA (Special Sex Offender Disposition Alternative)

In addition to these pre-commitment and prevention services, the state also funds two alternatives to standard commitment to juvenile rehabilitation facilities. The first, the Special Sex Offender Disposition Alternative (SSODA), for first time sex offenders, allows the court to suspend the disposition of the offender and require the youth to receive treatment in the community. The total SSODA allocation for FY 2009-2011 is approximately $4.4 million.

CDDA (Chemical Dependency Disposition Alternative)

The second alternative, legislated in 1997, created the Chemical Dependency Disposition Alternative (CDDA), as an alternative to standard commitment for juvenile offenders who are chemically dependent, with a standard range of local sanctions or 15 – 36 weeks of confinement and who haven't committed an A- or B+ offense. The sum of the confinement and outpatient treatment may not exceed 90 days. The CDDA funding allocation for FY 2009-2011 is approximately $4.6 million.

CJAA
(Community Juvenile Accountability Act)

The 1997 State Legislature passed the Community Juvenile Accountability Act (CJAA), which enabled local courts to develop and administer community-based accountability and intervention programs. Functional Family Therapy, Aggression Replacement Training, Multi-Systemic Therapy, and Coordination of Services are the four approved CJAA interventions. These programs are evidenced-based and have demonstrated their effectiveness in reducing recidivism among juvenile offenders. The CJAA funding allocation for FY 2009-2011 is approximately 6 million dollars.

These funds, administered by the state, and allocated to counties, are combined into a single Consolidated Juvenile Services contract. This consolidation enables counties to blend funds into service packages that better meet the needs of youth and families.

Disposition Options

Disposition options implemented in July 2003 include the Mental Health Disposition Option (similar to CDDA and SSODA except for juveniles with mental health related issues) and Option B, a suspended commitment option for youth not eligible for CDDA, SSODA, or MHDA. These alternatives may be used to provide community-based services to individual youth who would otherwise be committed to state care.

Each county's share of CJS funding for FY 2009-2011 is shown in the following tables.
